“The full crowd responded with a standing ovation to Daymark’s energy, humor, and obvious mastery of Irish traditional dance tunes and songs. From Dan Foster’s flexible fiddling, to Will Woodson’s driving flute and smooth piping, and guitarist Eric McDonald’s air-tight rhythms and smart harmonies, Daymark provided a showcase for a living tradition. McDonald stood out on vocals as a song interpreter in some well-chosen ballads, which Daymark so expertly arranged with counter-melodies, they could have sounded complete as instrumentals. It was impressive to see the three players create an imaginative world of style and sound from a centuries-old folk heritage.” — Cara Lieurance, co-host of The Pure Drop, WMUK, 102.1 FM, Kalamazoo, MI
