The 'official' pub closing time in Manhattan in the 'old days' was 4:00 AM. I'm not sure what it is at present but probably about the same. That rule however seemed to apply to new patrons only and didn't affect anyone inside, who could finish their drinks in peace even if they couldn't expect any refills. Most of the places put out all but a few lights as a sign to the cops of their good intentions. Many's the summer Sunday morning we'd emerge from some murky smoke-filled pub into the clear daylight of dawn (as the song so poetically puts it) to make Mass (maybe), have something to eat (probably), and get lots of sleep (definitely) in order to start the whole crazy procedure again that night.
