It happens that Cape Cod can go for years without more than six or seven inches of snow during the winter (which sometimes lasts until mid-April). Other years we'll get blasted with two storms a week. Problem is that you can never tell which kind of winter it's going to be. (2015 was a bad one - snow piles didn't disappear until nearly June - 2016 and 2017 not quite as awful, 2018 colder than you-know-what for two weeks and one 'noreaster' after another - but not much snow).
